You don't want to be anywhere near this guy. We first met the self-opinionated Jack Gardner in The Honey Do List, a recent EVVY Merit Award winner. Ten years have rolled by, and he is now totally self-absorbed and absolutely paranoid about his health. His fruitless search for the Fountain of Youth has turned him into a full-blown hypochondriac and he stumbles through life in a medication induced haze. Brain fog is a constant companion but his troubles really ramp up when he falls asleep. Vivid dreams grab hold of his mind, and he assumes a dozen different identities as he gallivants across the globe leaving a trail of chaos in his wake. In turn rent collector, British diplomat, stock broker, water engineer, travel writer and Catholic priest, Jack crosses paths with a host of zany characters, goes completely blind while traveling on the London tube, discovers that he has a sister neither he nor his parents knew about, and gets embroiled in a nasty scandal involving a Chicago basketball star and a notorious gang leader. His efforts to umpire a cricket match set two villages at each other's throats, and as a rookie priest, his first celebrity wedding barely escapes becoming a nationally televised disaster. He joins a religious sect and immediately falls under the spell of the breathtakingly attractive Shantelle, whose flashing eyes trigger uncontrollable surges in his rebellious hormones. In an effort to impress this goddess, he visits a local drinking hole to recruit converts but things don't quite work out as planned. He falls ill, is persuaded that a bowl of Resurrection Soup might ease his symptoms, and instead,...
