Brand New Book  Print on Demand .TREE HOUSE TALES is a collection of short fiction non-fiction written between 1983 2014. It was never a planned literary work nor was it a proto-collection awaiting critical mass. It or rather they were files saved in a common folder, once manila now digital. Short stories, anecdotes, art, poetry and beats-mes kept company for as much as 30 years-all that time left to their own devices. Works which originally had little in common--besides being file neighbors--began communicating in ways humans cannot begin to understand. They found they had commonalities they never guessed, not just that We have a common author thing. Fantasy, folk tradition mythic stories about the Fae found they had more in common than an author. Horror humor agreed to disagree. Maybe even work together. Deities and Demons, not so much. Accounts written by about aliens compared notes with Tales by about the Fae. Stoahs, dragons seabirds debated the existence of humans. Wishbones bear-eating fish learned about reality (whatever that is) at the feet of non-fiction. (Feet?) Since no two of their fellow literary prisoners were alike, the short works suspected that readers must vary in their tastes. There might be 100s, even 1000s of people yearning to read about vengeful trout, queens of the Fae, unlikely aliens kept safe by Witness Protection, what hit men do on their day off why tech can be as terrifying as hurricanes but sorcerers are much worse! Critical mass just sort of happened. Short stories, anecdotes, artwork, poems, extracts beats-mes discovered that they felt homeless unread because they were homeless and unread. Every anecdote each tale from the Faerie Realm began dreaming about living where Ursa Major,...
