Once in a while you find a book that defies all the rules of normal, a book that doesn't fit neatly into any particular shelf of the bookstore. Off Center is one of those books. It isn't a fictional work, because most of the stories are mostly true. It isn't a non-fiction work, because some of the stories are almost entirely unreal. It isn't a collection of poetry, because there are only a few poems included. It isn't a book on family, even though many of the stories come out of one fun-loving, thinking, growing family. It isn't a book of philosophy or religion, though both can be seen, whether between the lines or actually in them. What is it, then? It is stories. It is humor. It is poetry. It is observations. It is... living, on paper. Off Center is... well, it is the Ramblings, Poetry, Prose, Humor, and Thoughts of a Man with a Pen. Want to know more? Come, then, and join author Mark Cheatwood as he journeys through a life...
