In regard to the two types of word-order series used by the Columbia students there is a marked advantage for the series first used. As in Table XIV. there is a gradual fall in efficiency with decrease in age and school experience. In the test with ten characters the same tendency is shown for age and sex difference as in the word test. In the second test, using characters (Table XVI.) a few groups are shown where the per cent. produced is less than that for the first test. As no directions were given about order in the character test, no figures were computed for efficiency. Table XVII. gives a comparison of the results of Royersford schools...
